Introduction

If you have dementia or know someone who does, this guide will help you understand more about the condition and how to find support in your community. This directory has been created by the Woodspring Locality Partnership, which is a team of local health, care and community experts. Your health and wellbeing are important, and it's helpful to know what local clinical and support services are available, and how you might go about accessing these at the right time.

You also told us that receiving clinical support is only one aspect of living well with dementia. Financial matters, the practicalities of daily living, and social, emotional and wellbeing support are also important, and can sometimes be overlooked when there are lots to think about and organise. Being informed allows you and your carer to access the right support at the right time. This can help people living with dementia to maintain independence as abilities change, enabling a better quality of life, based on what is important to them.

This directory shares information on a range of local and national services and resources. These are for consideration only, we do not endorse any of them in particular and you may not need to access all of them. We have included the information you need to be able to access information and resources directly, but if you find this difficult please contact us and we can supply you with electronic or hard copies of the information listed here.

What is dementia?

Dementia is an umbrella term that is used to describe a progressive decline in someone's mental abilities. Dementia is not a normal part of ageing, it is caused by diseases of the brain. The symptoms of dementia are not the same for everyone and can vary for each individual.

Although widely quoted the term dementia, technically, does not describe an actual illness. It describes a set of symptoms which might be brought about by one or more illnesses which might affect the brain.

These symptoms might involve significant short term memory loss, disorientation or mood swings. Unfortunately, dementia is progressive and currently there is no positive cure.

Alzheimer's disease is the most common but other causes include vascular dementia, dementia with Lewy bodies and frontotemporal dementia.

Diagnosing dementia, and which type of dementia someone has, is important. It ensures people can get the right support and treatments plan for the future, and develop strategies to live well with dementia. This may include anything from taking up new hobbies, attending a support group or taking part in research.

Each person is unique and the course of their dementia will take an individual pathway

What are the types of dementia?

The word 'dementia' is an umbrella term for symptoms such as memory loss, confusion and personality change. Research has shown that the four main types of illness which may lead to dementia are:-

Alzheimer's disease

Alzheimer's disease, first described by the German neurologist Alois Alzheimer, is an Organic Degenerative Disorder affecting the brain. During the course of the disease `plaques and tangles` develop in the structure of the brain, leading to the death of brain cells. We also know that people with Alzheimer's have a shortage of some important chemicals in the brain. These chemicals are involved with the transmission of messages within the brain. Alzheimer's is a progressive disease that gradually, over time, damages more parts of the brain. As It develops the symptoms become more severe.

Vascular dementia

To be healthy and function properly, brain cells need a good supply of oxygen which is carried by the blood. The blood is delivered through a network of blood vessels called the vascular system. If the vascular system within the brain becomes damaged and the blood cannot reach the brain cells they will eventually die. This can lead to the onset of vascular dementia.

There are a number of conditions that can cause, or increase, damage to the vascular system. These include high blood pressure, heart problems, high cholesterol and diabetes. It is therefore important that these conditions are identified and treated at the earliest opportunity.

Dementia with Lewy bodies

Dementia with Lewy bodies is a progressive disease. This means that over time the symptoms will become worse. In general, dementia with Lewy bodies progresses at about the same rate as Alzheimer's disease, typically over several years. People with dementia with Lewy bodies may display some symptoms of both Alzheimer's and early or young-onset dementia'. Other symptoms include cognitive decline, hallucinations and sleep disturbance. When it develops before age 65 this is referred to as young or early onset dementia.

What is young onset dementia?

There are around 900,000 people in the UK living with dementia, and the likelihood of developing dementia increases significantly with age. When a person develops dementia before the age of 65, this is known as 'young-onset dementia'. Over 42,000 people in the UK are living with young-onset dementia (and are often referred to as 'younger people with dementia').

Like all people with dementia, younger people may experience a wide range of symptoms, especially in the early stages of dementia. However, they are likely to need different support from older people.

People whose symptoms started when they were under the age of 65 are often known as 'younger people with dementia' or as having young-onset dementia. This is not for a biological reason, but is based on the fact that 65 was the usual age of retirement for many people. People sometimes use the terms 'early-onset dementia' or 'working-age dementia'. This information uses the term 'young-onset dementia'.

Dementia is caused by a wide range of different diseases. This is similar for younger and older people ('late-onset dementia'), but there are important differences in how dementia affects younger people. These include the following:

- ↔ A wider range of diseases cause young-onset dementia.
- ↔ A younger person is much more likely to have a rarer form of dementia.
- ↔ Younger people with dementia are less likely to have memory loss as one of their first symptoms.
- ↔ Young-onset dementia is more likely to cause problems with movement, walking, co-ordination or balance.
- ↔ Young-onset dementia is more likely to be inherited (passed on through genes) this affects up to 10% of younger people with dementia.
- ↔ Many younger people with dementia don't have any other serious or long-term health conditions.

Someone who is diagnosed under the age of 65 needs to adjust to living with a long term condition as a younger person. They might be concerned about the effects this will have on their family, relationships, finances and daily life. They may also be worried that any children or siblings will have a higher risk of developing dementia.

Are you worried someone has dementia?

There are other reasons why someone might be experiencing memory loss. However, if dementia is found early, its progress can be slowed down in some cases, so the person may be able to maintain their mental function for longer. Although dementia is not only about memory loss, that's one of the main signs.

Some of the other signs of dementia include:

- 1 Memory loss: Illustration of a person looking at a calendar with a thought bubble containing a calendar.
- 2 Difficulty performing familiar tasks: Illustration of a person at a desk looking confused while holding a document.
- 3 Problems with language: Illustration of a person writing on a shopping list that says 'Shopping list: Apple, Milk'.
- 4 Disorientation to time and place: Illustration of a person holding a map in a park.
- 5 Poor or decreased judgement: Illustration of a person sitting at a table with a person in a wheelchair, with exclamation marks above them.
- 6 Problems keeping track of things: Illustration of a person looking at a 'PAST DUE' envelope.
- 7 Misplacing things: Illustration of a person looking at a kitchen counter with a missing item.
- 8 Changes in mood and behaviour: Illustration of a person holding two different masks.
- 9 Challenges understanding visual and spatial information: Illustration of a car at a traffic light with a thought bubble showing a traffic light.
- 10 Withdrawal from work or social activities: Illustration of a person standing alone at a table where others are sitting.

If these signs are new, they may be a sign of dementia.
Dementia is not a normal part of ageing.
Speak to your doctor or contact your dementia and Alzheimer association.

If someone you know is becoming increasingly forgetful, encourage them to see a GP to talk about the early signs of dementia

You may like to suggest you go with your friend or relative to see a GP so you can support them. You'll also be able to help them recall what has been discussed. A GP will ask how the symptoms have developed over time. They may also do a memory test and physical examination.

Blood tests may be done to check if the symptoms are being caused by another condition. If other causes can be ruled out, the GP will usually refer your friend or relative to a memory clinic, or other specialist service, where they may have more assessments to confirm whether they have dementia.

Living with dementia

A diagnosis of dementia doesn't necessarily mean you have to stop doing things you enjoy. We've put together some tips to help you to continue enjoying life and stay as independent as possible. Living well with dementia may mean different things for different people. But here are some general tips that have helped others.

Around the house

- Follow a routine. Doing things at the same time each day or week can reassure you and stimulate your memory.
- Pin notes up in prominent places if there are things you need to do regularly, like locking the doors at night or putting out the recycling.
- Carry a notebook to write down daily tasks.
- Put important things, like glasses or keys, in the same place every time so that you know where to find them.
- Get a clock that shows the date and day of the week.

Keeping yourself busy

- It can be hard to concentrate on the television. Listening to the radio can be easier as the brain only has to concentrate on the sound. Music can help bring back memories, which can be reassuring and enjoyable.
- If it's hard to focus on or follow books, try reading short stories or newspaper and magazine articles. Keep doing crosswords and Sudoku puzzles if you enjoy them, and don't worry if it takes you longer to complete them or you need to switch to an easier version.
- Think about volunteering. Contact Royal Volunteering to find out about volunteering opportunities.
- If you find it hard to manage the recipes you used to use, try to adapt them to suit you. For instance, if you find it hard to concentrate on a recipe with lots of different steps, look for a shorter one.

At work

- If you're still working, it's a good idea to tell your employer about your dementia diagnosis so they can help to you continue working. They have a legal duty to take reasonable steps to help you to continue working.
- If you decide to stop working, get advice on your pension and any benefits you may be eligible for first.
- If you're in the armed forces, work on a plane or ship, or your job involves driving, you must tell your employer if you are diagnosed with dementia.

Living with dementia

Interacting with others

- Ask questions if you don't understand or have forgotten what was said.
- Put important telephone numbers by the phone.
- Stay in touch with family and friends rather than isolate yourself.
- Carry a help card that can let people know you have dementia and includes the contact details of a chosen contact.
- Make sure other people don't take over - they may think they're helping by doing as much for you as possible.

Out and about

- If you drive, tell the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority (DVLA) and your insurance company about your diagnosis. You may not have to stop driving straight away. If they decide you can continue driving they will review this again, usually after a year.
- When booking a holiday think about whether you want to travel to somewhere new or somewhere familiar. There are specialist companies, such as Revitalise, Tourism for all and Dementia adventure, that offer package holidays for people with dementia.
- Physical activity is not only good for your health, it can also improve your mood and lift your spirits. Walking, swimming, dancing and gentle exercise classes are all good options.
- If you're finding gardening harder than you used to contact Thrive, who offer advice on practical solutions, such as choosing specially adapted tools, to make gardening easier.

Telling people about your dementia

When you're ready, it's best to tell others about your diagnosis. It's also good to tell them what you may have trouble with, such as following a conversation or remembering what was said. You may find some people treat you differently than they did before.

This may be because they don't understand what dementia is or want to help but don't know how. Try to explain what your diagnosis means and the ways in which they can help and support you.

This can be difficult to accept. But you can meet new people through activity and support groups. Focus on the people who are there for you.

Why is physical activity beneficial for people with dementia?

Staying active has a huge number of benefits for everyone, including people who have any type of dementia. It can improve the health of your heart and blood vessels, and help keep your bones strong and reduce the risk of osteoporosis. Staying flexible and strong can help with the ability to dress, clean, cook and perform other daily activities. It reduces the risk of falls by improving balance and strength. Exercise and physical activity also help with getting a good night's sleep, and can be a great way to meet others and get social, which can reduce the feeling of isolation some people with dementia feel.

15 WAYS TO MOVE MORE AT HOME

Here is a range of activity ideas to help you move more at home throughout the day. Start slowly and build up. Try the warm up activities first then find the activities that work best for you and your ability level. To make exercises more challenging, use small weights such as water bottles, lift your knees higher, use your arms and jump or hop.

WE ARE UNDEFEATABLE

WARM UP
To loosen ankles, sit down and alternate between digging your heel and pointing your toe. To loosen shoulders, circle them up to your ears, back and down.

HAVE FUN BEING ACTIVE
While you're waiting for the kettle to boil why not put on your favourite music and dance like no-one's watching!
Play active games such as kicking a ball around the garden, throw and catch games or play skittles using things from around the house.

MOVEMENTS YOU CAN DO SEATED OR STANDING
To stretch your upper body, clasp your hands above your head and push upwards, gently bend over to each side to stretch the upper body. You can do this standing or seated.
While you're watching tv, get a small bottle of water in each hand as weights. For a bicep curl, curl your lower arms up to your shoulder and back down. For a shoulder press have your hands at shoulder height, and raise your hands above your head and back down.
Leg or knee raises can be done standing or sitting. For the leg raise, sit on a chair with both feet on the floor and bring one leg up until it's level with the floor and then back down again.

STAY STRONG
Calf raises can strengthen your legs - hold on to the back of a chair with your feet flat on the ground.
Stand on your tip toes and hold for a few seconds before lowering your heels back down.
Squats are a good exercise for your whole body. Holding onto a chair, ensure your back is straight and feet are hip width apart and bend at the knees, as if you're going to sit down. Then straighten your legs to stand up straight again.
Stand up from sitting and back down again keeping your chest up. Do this as many times as you can. If you're feeling comfortable not to use your hands to help you, hold a small weight such as a small bag of sugar to your chest for more effort.

MOVING AROUND YOUR HOME
Standing at a slight angle facing a wall, have your hands shoulder width apart at shoulder height. Breathe in as you bend your elbows and lower your body to the wall, then push back up.
Walk around your garden or home while calling a friend - a good chat is great for your mental wellbeing.
When moving around your home try marching, lifting your knees up as high as they will go; swing your arms for more effort. If you want more challenge jog on the spot.

If you've been sitting for a while and have steps or stairs at home, try walking up and down the stairs or use the bottom stair to step up and down.
If jumping jacks aren't right for you, try half jacks instead. Step to the side and raise an arm at the same time as the stepping leg.
RELAX WHILE BEING ACTIVE
Gentle stretches are good for relaxation, such as lying on the floor and gently bringing the knees up to the chest. Or sitting on a chair, straighten up your back and gently twist round to one side and hold for a few seconds; repeat on the other side.

Things to consider?

We know that getting a dementia diagnosis can sometimes make you feel overwhelmed. Many people find that planning ahead for the future can help them feel more assured. If you have a dementia diagnosis, or are caring for someone who does, you could be entitled to a number of benefits.

With so many things to co-ordinate and keep track of, keeping on top of finances and benefits can feel like another thing to do that often slips down the list. Some find they avoid these matters if they've not had a lot of involvement with family finances before. Both Alzheimer's Society and Dementia UK produce booklets which provide information on the benefits that you could be entitled to.

- If you receive Income Support, income-related Employment and Support Allowance, income-related Jobseeker's Allowance, Universal Credit or Pension Credit guarantee, you may qualify for help with your housing costs including Council tax. Call your local Council Tax department and ask for a form for 'Council Tax discount because of mental impairment'.
- You may also be eligible to apply for help if you are on a low income, such as a retirement pension and other pensions, low wages or Pension Credit. Call the Universal Credit helpline on 0800 328 5644 between 8am and 6pm, Monday to Friday.
- Carers Allowance. As a carer, you may be entitled to one or more benefits to help you with the cost of caring. Call the Carer's Allowance Unit on 0800 731 0297 between 10am and 2pm, Monday to Friday.

Having a confirmed dementia diagnosis can help you access benefits that can be used to pay for care. There are also daily practicalities to consider such as taxi cards, disabled parking badges. Age UK can assist you to apply.

Fire Safety, Avon Fire & Rescue Service - Home Fire Safety Visits

We assess all requests to ensure we meet the needs of those who are most vulnerable and where we know there is an increased risk of fire. To request a free Home Fire Safety Visit, Please Telephone - 0117 926 2061

Avon & Somerset Police - Dementia Safeguarding Scheme (Herbert Protocol)

The Dementia Safeguarding Scheme (Herbert Protocol) is a national scheme encouraging carers, family and friends to provide useful information which can be used in the event of a vulnerable person going missing. Visit the Avon & Somerset Police website to sign up.

Things to consider?

Advanced Planning

An Advance Care Plan is a record of your preferences about your future care and support, including decisions about medical treatment and end of life care. It is sometimes known as an Advance Statement.

It is not legally binding, but will help the people involved in your care understand and respect your views and wishes.

If you have dementia, making an Advance Care Plan is important because it may become harder to make decisions or communicate your wishes as your condition progresses.

If you are making an Advance Care Plan, try to involve close family members and friends, and your health and social care professionals.

An Advance Care Plan covers matters like:

- ↪ How you would like to be cared for, and who by.
- ↪ Medical treatments you do and don't want.
- ↪ Where you would prefer to die.
- ↪ Funeral wishes and arrangements.
- ↪ Details of your Will.
- ↪ Your spiritual and cultural values and how they will be respected.
- ↪ Things that are important in your life now.
- ↪ Who you would like to be involved in making decisions if you can no longer do so.
You can do this by giving them lasting power of attorney.

The process of advance care planning is not designed to be carried out in a 'one off' conversation or meeting but is a process that takes place over time, perhaps with several discussions with those around you.

Some of the questions or things we suggest you think about may not be easy and may take time or consideration; you may wish to come back at another time and that is fine. Once it has been written down it does not mean it cannot be changed; it is expected that the contents are reviewed at times to ensure they are still valid, so including future review dates is encouraged.

When you are thinking about your future care, it is important to discuss your wishes with family, friends and health and social care professionals and make a record of what you would like to happen.

Who is a carer?

A carer is anybody who provides care or support for someone who needs help because of an illness or disability. They might be a partner, relative, friend or neighbour.

Many carers feel they are doing what anyone else would in the same situation by being there for their relative or friend. The care they give is unpaid, although they may be eligible for certain benefits. Anyone of any age can become a carer, and there is not always a clear cut point when someone becomes another person's carer.

Care workers, support workers and personal assistants are different from unpaid carers. These are people who are paid for a specific service. This might be for domestic tasks like cleaning or shopping, or help with personal care, such as washing, dressing or managing medication.

Caring for someone with dementia

People who provide care or support for someone with dementia may experience a range of different feelings.

Caring for someone can be rewarding; you may be supporting someone you love very much, and may gain new skills and build closer relationships in the process. But caring can also be challenging. At times it may be physically and mentally exhausting, and the needs of a person with dementia will usually increase over time. It's important that carers access support for themselves and those they care for when they need it and know that they are not alone.

Your GP surgery and local council should be able to help you find local sources of support. As well as medical and social care support, there may be other helpful services in your area, such as befriending services, memory cafés and social groups.

Safe Places Safe Places is a scheme to help people with communication difficulties feel safe when they are out and about. How the Safe Places scheme works When someone joins Safe Places they are given a card and key fob which has a dedicated telephone number and a unique reference number on. The card will hold details of a trusted contact such as a parent or carer and information about the best way to communicate with the cardholder. For example, by speaking slowly or using sign language If a person has been a victim of crime, is lost, feels scared or upset and does not know what to do, they can call the Safe Places number. They can use the dedicated telephone number to contact the police control room directly. They will be asked for their reference number to help the police identify them when they call. Safe Places buildings They can also visit a Safe Places building for help. A Safe Place is a location where cardholders can find help and reassurance. Safe Place buildings can be identified by the Safe Places window sticker. All police stations with enquiry offices are Safe Places.	 How to apply for the scheme The Scheme is open to anyone who has communication difficulties, such as dementia or a learning disability and frequents or resides in the Avon and Somerset force area. The Safe Places scheme has no age limit. To sign up for the Safe Places & Dementia Safeguarding scheme, and for more information visit the Avon and Somerset police website.
